

Native Instruments launches special offers on Heavyocity instruments

Exclusive discounts on four special bundles and twelve individual products until September 5

Berlin, August 23, 2017 – Native Instruments has once again partnered with Heavyocity to offer up to two thirds off the cinematic sound specialist's range of KONTAKT instruments and REAKTOR devices. Available from the NI Online shop until September 5, the offers include four exclusive bundles, and twelve individual products – including new instruments Vocalise 2 and NOVO: Modern Strings, plus the new PUNISH multi-effects unit.

“The team here at Heavyocity is really excited to partner with Native Instruments again,” says Ari Winters, Creative Director at Heavyocity. “For the last eight years, we’ve been offering world-class cinematic instruments and effects, and NI’s NKS format has truly deepened the connection between their hardware and our cutting-edge software. With this special, we’re particularly excited to provide an exceptional offer on some of our newest instruments and effects, including NOVO: Modern Strings, PUNISH, and Vocalise 2.”

Native Kontrol Standard (NKS) is an extended plug-in format developed by NI, and available for all virtual instrument manufacturers. It allows for intuitive and seamless interaction between NI hardware and hundreds of virtual instruments from more than 40 leading developers. With NKS, Heavyocity's award winning instruments boast deep integration with MASCHINE and KOMplete KONTROL S-Series keyboards, including support for the Native Browser (including preset tagging), Native Map, and Light Guide.
